Madrid remains one of the most exciting capital cities in Europe.

In the very centre of Spain, surrounded by the arid 'Mesta' plane, Madrid is the highest capital in Europe. Madrid's history reaches back to the 10th century as a fortified Moorish town. In 1607, Madrid became Spain's permanent capital and has flourished ever since, making it a vibrant, modern city. Visits to the opera, theatre, Royal Palace and museums are just a sample of the cultural delights Madrid has to offer to the international student.

It was only in 1561 that Felipe II made Madrid the capital of Spain. The dynamism of the city which ensued can be best seen in the architecture. The imposing colonial buildings to be seen almost everywhere probably contribute to the unflappable self-confidence and composure of the people of Madrid.

Hardly any other metropolis has opened the door to modern Europe as much as Madrid has after King Juan Carlos came to reign in 1975. Indeed, the monarch is widely credited with having overseen Spain's transition from dictatorship to democracy. The capital's remarkable collection of museums and galleries includes The Prado. It alone is considered to hold the most significant collection of historical art in all of Spain. Take some souvenirs of Madrid's majestic past back home, you will definitely find something at one of the best flea markets in the world, an absolute must for antique collectors. There are plenty of cafes and bars. Anyone who wishes to enjoy Spanish culture and learn the language will achieve this with the help of our Sprachcaffe/Languages PLUS teachers. Our staff is always well informed when it comes to current events and will make sure you get to know the city.
